ACHIAVEL's Distinction between the Right of accusing Magistrates, and the License of Slandering them, has generally been allowed to be just. The former is necessary for the Support of Liberty, which must be lost, were popular Magistrates left to act without Controul, or were too mighty to be accountable; and for the Security of Magistrates as well as of Liberty, which without Magistracy cannot subsist, as their Persons ought to be defended against Violence, so ought their Reputation to be against Calumny, which is Violence done to their Characters.

I HAVE observed already, That whoever is permitted to say what he will of his Governors, will soon be stronger than they; and I have given an Instance of a wretched Fellow in Rags, who by the Power of Invektive, raised a helpless Prisoner to a Diadem, degraded a mighty Emperor from his Throne to a Prison, adjudged powerful Ministers to Axes and Bow strings, exalted the Banish'd and Despairing into powerful Ministers, changed the whole Administration and all its Measures, and directed the Fate of a vast Empire.

It is not a sufficient Answer, to alledge that the People had been first greatly oppressed, though it be true; for under that Sort of Government they are always oppressed, and the Change of their Governors is only the Change of Oppressors. But it is still very possible, by the same Means, by continual Invektives and Slander, thrown without Check, upon any Government whatsoever, to incense the People against it, to make them believe that they are oppressed when they are not, or to fill them with the Presages and Fears of Oppression, when none is intended: Nay, the very Methods taken to ease and relieve them, shall be misconstrued into Engines of Slavery, and fill them with Terror and Hate, instead of Joy and Gratitude. The Turks would think you blasphem'd, if you talk'd to them of restraining or qualifying their savage Monarchy; and the Spaniards would burn you, if you proposed to secure them from being burned, by destroying that earthly Hell, the Inquisition.

I LIKEWISE ask here again, What one Act of Oppression, what single Sign of Slavery, excited the late Rebellion? Yet the People, or a great Part of them, believed that they were undone, or going to be undone, because Incendiaries and Slanders, void of Conscience, told them so. The Multitude have not the keeping of their own Senses, whenever they are well heated by Declaimers, or misled by Deceivers; whatever they are then told, they believe, and not the less for its being false, or even impossible.

THE French League were much more hurtful and terrible to Henry IV. by their Lies and Slanders than by their Arms; and it was chiefly by their Lies about him, that they so long maintained their Arms against him. After one of his greatest Victories, a Victory so signal and complete, that it could not be concealed nor denied, a bold Lie was found expedient, and immediately publish'd, to keep up the Spirit of the Party: 'That it was, indeed, true, that the Catholics had lost the Day; but, for their Comfort, the Man of Bearn was killed.' This was the contumelious Nickname by which they call'd that brave Prince. And that it might not influence the People in his Favour, to see so many Papists of great Note engaged with him, those faithful and everlasting Liars the Monks assur'd them, 'That every Man who had joined him, had also actually renounc'd the Faith.' After his open Conversion to Popery, after a thousand Acts of Favour, and even Partiality, to the Papists, nay to those of the League, the fiercest Bigots and his bitterest Enemies, and after many Instances of Neglect towards his oldest and his fastest Friends, the Protestants, the same ghostly Incendiaries still li'd on impudently, and accus'd him of a concerted Design utterly to destroy the Catholic Church; and, to prevent what he never intended, they destroyed him.

HAD this Nation ever known a better Governor than our Great Queen Elizabeth, one more able, more indulgent to her People, more studious of publick Ease and Prosperity, or more fortunate? No. And did so much Ability, so much publick Spirit, continually pursuing the Good of the Whole, which is the main End and Duty of Reigning, secure her Quiet, or stop the Mouth of Malignity and Slander? No. Was it not her greatest Struggle and Difficulty to defend herself and her Government against popular Disaffections and Combinations, raised by busy Incendiaries and evil Tongues, more formidable to her than invincible Armadoes and armed Hosts?

DID the invincible Integrity, and elevated Capacity of John de Wit, his Zeal and endless Labours for his Country, defend his Reputation or his Person from the Fury and bloody Hands of the Multitude, seduced and incensed by the lying Arts and busy Emisaries of his Enemies, as if that worthy Patriot had betrayed them all to France? A Falshood more incredible and repugnant to his Character could not have been invented; yet this incredible Falshood was believed, and suffered to produce the Butchery of him and that of his Brother.

THE Emperor Aurelian was murdered upon a Lye told to the Soldiery by a guilty Villain, in order to escape Punishment for his own Guilt: And several of the great Emperors were depose by the Dint of prevailing Lyes, raised and spread to frighten and provoke the People and Soldiery, who, in the Hurry of their Rage and Credulity, wrought sudden Revolutions in the State, and frequently, when they had done it, grew sorry for it, being undeceived too late; yet perhaps it was impossible to undeceive them sooner and in time, since, in the Heat of their Rage and Belief, they would have murdered any Man who would have attempted it.

WHEN the People are angry, they reckon for their Enemy every Man who speaks Peace or Sense to them, and love, as their true Friends, all such as plunge them still farther into Madness and Mistakes; like a Man that is drunk, quarrelling with those who deny him what hurts him, and hugging such as feed his Madness and Fever. Have we not often seen them adoring Fools and Fellows more than half mad, reviling the wisest and best Men in the Nation? Charmed with Lyes and Stupidity, persecuting Truth and Common Sense? Cursing the late Lord Gedolphin as a Presbyterian, though he was known to be zealous for the Church, even to a Degree of Partiality and Weakness? Raging at their own Redemption from Bondage, and caressing the Parricides who were carrying them back thither?

AND what were the mighty Arts or Instruments that thus bewitched them and drove them headlong and blindfold? Why, no other than miserable Libels and Libellers, belying the Name of the Lord, and abusing the Ministry and the Revolution; such Wretches as Sacheverell and Abel Roper; Writers whose Names are most of them now lost and unknown, at least utterly contemned; Writings which no Man would now read, or could understand, but which then delighted and intoxicated the Nation. Yet by the Influence of such Writers and Writings, the great Advocates for publick Liberty, were become Objects of popular Hatred and bitter Reproach: The impious Knaves and their crazy Accomplices, who publicly contended that the People were born to Thralldom, nay, doomed to be Slaves by divine Institution, were the People's Idols; and all this Fierceness and Phrenzy worked up by mere Dinn, and Jargon, and Railing.

THE People, when they are well used, and free from the Influence and Seduction of Demagogues, are certainly very peaceable and harmless. But then they are easily seduced and inflamed; and when they are so, they are very unreasonable and outrageous. As they are themselves unacquainted with the Motives of publick Measures, and the Characters of publick Men, they form their Opinion about them by what they hear others say of them, and too seldom examine whether their Informers be Impartial or no, or whether their Representation of Men and Measures be candidly or spitefully made; and it is natural for the Discontented to spread their Discontents and communicate their own ill Humour; 'tis no Wonder that some, perhaps few at first, begin to complain, others, and, in a short Time, many, follow their Example and adopt their Stile, and that what is so naturally catching, should grow at last general.

By this Means 'tis very possible for an Administration to grow unpopular without being faulty; and when those who are decried are hated, and those who decry them are believed, every Misrepresentation, every spiteful Tale, however false and improbable, passes for Truth, and adds to the general Prejudice. Hence the Force and Effect of publick Lyes, which are the Food and Strength of Party; and this Effect is a notable Aggravation of their Wickedness.

IT is extremely blameable in any Man, by any Means, to disturb and inflame the People, on account of his private Disgusts; and when he does it by Falsifications, Inventions, malicious Stories, and personal Calumnies, it is infamous. Perhaps he himself may not so judge of his Conduct, or in the least censure himself for it; since Men abandoned to their Passions, are apt to construe every thing to be just which gratifies their Passions; or probably their Repentment may so far transport them, that they believe to be True whatever hurts or exposes the Man they hate. And this may be some Excuse for the unreasonable Conduct of angry Men; but it can be none for those who have not the same Cause to be angry. It is indeed an Indignity to Reason, and Act of Folly, for any Man to wax Wroth merely because another Man does, for John to rail without Cause, because James pretends to have Cause.

OF what Concern was it to the People of Great Britain, that the Earl of Mar, always reckoned an artful Man, and the Duke of Ormond, never esteem'd a very able Man, were removed from their Employments by a Prince, who thought he had more Reason to dismiss them than to confide in them? Did the King in thus dismissing them, at all strain the Prerogative, or violate any one Law? Yet we all remember what Outrages followed that Dismission, especially that of the Duke, as if he had been the Atlas of the Church, and the Church must have fallen with him, inasmuch that to save the Church and restore her Champion, all the Acts of Fury, Perjury, Irreligion, and Madness that could be committed, were committed; the vilest Calumnies were published, in defence of the Cause of Truth; and a barbarous Rebellion was raised by the Advocates for Passive Obedience.

Could there be more glaring Impiety grafted upon glaring Absurdities? But glaring as both were, the People, drunk with Disaffection, and far from seeing either their own Folly or Wickedness, when they were actually defying common Sense, and breaking all the Commands of God, went on to hate and curse those who were serving both Church and State, and to adore and extol the Men who thus hurried them on to Popery and Confusion, to Guilt and Halts.

COUNTRY NEWS.

Lancaster, April 29. Last Week dy'd here, Christopher Hopkins, Bookseller, a Person remarkable for having never drank any strong Liquors. He was well skill'd in the Greek and Latin, and most of the modern Languages. His Zeal for the present Establishment appear'd in a singular Instance, of his buying up all the Gun Powder in Lancaster, and drowning it in a Well, to prevent its falling into the Hands of the Scotch Rebels. This, together with his assiduous Care in sending Advice to Col Stanhope, then at Preston, about their Number, Strength, and Marches, procur'd him some Favours from the Government, viz. The Post Office (continued to his Widow) and the first Vacancy in the Customs. A Pally seiz'd him about two Years ago, which took him off in the 71st Year of his Age.

The Royal BEAUTIFYING FLUID.

SO exceedingly valued by Ladies of Quality and all who have used it, for its transcendent Excellency in Beautifying the Face, Neck, and Hands to the most exquisite Perfection possible, is to be had only at Mr. Radford's Toyshop at the Rose and Crown against St. Clement's Church-yard in the Strand.

It gives an inexpressible fine Air to the Features of the Face on the Spot, and a surprising Handfomness to the Neck and Hands, which it immediately makes exceedingly smooth, fine, and delicately white.

It gives an inexpressible fine Air to the Features of the Face on the Spot, and a surprising Handfomness to the Neck and Hands, which it immediately makes exceedingly smooth, fine, and delicately white.

Nothing in the World can sooner or more certainly take away all disagreeable Redness, Spots, Pimples, Heats, Roughness, Morpew, Worms in the Face, Marks of the Small Pox, Sun-burn, or any other Discolouring, nor remove all Wrinkles so perfectly; for it quickly makes the Skin become so incomparably fine, clear, plump, soft, and beautifully fair, as to cause Admiration in the Beholders.

It really gives a most engaging resplendent Brightness to the whole Countenance, and causes sparkling Life, Spirit, a juvenile Bloom to reign in every Feature, and yet is nothing of Paint, but far exceeds it, by its bringing the Skin, whether of the Face, Neck, or Hands, and tho' brown, red or rough, to a natural, youthful Fairness, Smoothness, and most charming Delicacy, which Paint only faintly imitates; neither is this ROYAL BEAUTIFYER prepared from the least Particle of Mercury, or any Thing Metallic, but is perfectly harmless and may be given inwardly even to Children. It has also a pleasant Scent, will not soil the finest Lawn, and is very agreeable to use.

But these its admirable Properties, by which it vastly exceeds any Thing whatever for the like Purpose, have occasioned many to imitate it under various other Names, beware therefore of such Impositions, the true ROYAL BEAUTIFYING FLUID, that has given such universal Satisfaction to so many Ladies of Distinction, being only to be had at Mr. Radford's Toyshop above-mentioned at 3 s. 6 d. a Bottle with Directions, and no where else in England.
